Operationally set wave and auxiliary volume. Simpler control over wave and auxiliary volume with separate sliders. Features a three-button device selector control. Audio level control. You can run the application with admin privileges to avoid any possible conflicts in modern Windows editions. Latest version of the .NET framework is required. Some users reported difficulty with installation in Windows 7 64-bit version. Sound quality is of poor quality. Verdict: For those who wish to save some time, and don't want to mess with their default device or the built-in mixer, Cool Mixer 99 can be a useful tool to include on a portable device, if not on the internal computer. One can expect good performance when in use, and the advantage of two separate sliders for wave and auxiliary volume.

Q: Case insensitive 'like' in Sequelize I'm using sequelize with MySQL and the problem is that I need to use a "LIKE" query, but it's not case insensitive. I need it to be. I've tried using the function `MySQL.lower()`, but I get an error about it being unable to find the function. I've also tried using the MySQL function `"toLowerCase(string)"` directly, but that didn't work either. The query I'm using is: `MATCH(login:Login) WHERE login.user_id = :user_id AND LOWER(login.username) LIKE LOWER(% :username ) RETURN login`

A: You need to use a query object, not a model object. According to the sequelize docs the syntax you want is: `Sequelize.where(yourCondition).findAll()`

A: Sequelize is case-insensitive if you use a LIKE comparison. Example: `Sequelize.where( { name: { [Op.like]: `% ${name} %` } }`

Whether you're a software developer, a user, or a tester, chances are you've at least heard of Behavior Driven Development. It's a software development methodology based on a rich set of practices for software testers, which has been applied by many successful teams, including

Microsoft's, Google's, and Uber's. First, a bit of history: Behavior Driven Development was originally conceived and popularized by Alan Brown, who made his first (and only) appearance in a British computer magazine in 1999. In his 2edc1e01e8

This year, however, Build is shifting locations and jumping the release date, with the company holding off on the usual April/May timeframe. In a blog post, Microsoft announced that its annual conference, Build, will be held July 9-12, and is shifting from the start-of-year time frame to the summer. The Redmond, Wash.-based company has also pushed the release date of its Fall Creators Update, set to arrive in the Fall, to April 13th. Build has become one of Microsoft's more popular developer events, but it's often been held in the late spring and early summer. Microsoft has moved it earlier in the year before to get developers' attention earlier, and because the company always wants to have as many updates ready for Windows 10 as possible. This year, however, it's moving Build to the late summer so that more teams have a chance to update their products for the new release and potentially get some Q&A time with Microsoft. The conference will be held at its sprawling Redmond campus, a contrast to the last two years, which were in smaller locations. This is all part of Microsoft
